Seeking A Sensation

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press)

Carruthers jammed his nose into his pocket. It hit his big calabash pipe, took up his walking stick and soft hat and whistled to his dog, Mike. A moment later he was swinging off across the fields surrounding the aviation club.

Carruthers could not tell the dog that he had written a story in which an airship figured and that his knowledge of bird men and their craft was lamentably meager.

"We will stroll about the fields, Mike, in the hope that some conqueror of the air will chance to pass over our ignorant heads. In that way we may glean a sufficient atmosphere to make our story real."

Half an hour later Carruthers was lying full length in the long grass. Mike, more or less disgusted that the walk had turned out as it usually did, nuzzled about for venturesome snakes and moles.

Suddenly he pricked up his ears. A buzzing as of many bees disturbed the silence. The noise grew louder, nearer. Mike circled about like mad until he caught sight of the great flying thing that was approaching nearer and nearer.

Mike, completely disgusted at his master's lack of enthusiasm, put his nose to the sky and yelped frantically at the flying monster.

His efforts were successful. Carruthers awoke from his dreaming and sat bolt upright.

Steady and smooth as a bark on a calm sea the bi-plane sailed majestically through the air.

"By Jove, Mike!" Carruthers exclaimed in his enthusiasm. "I would give the whole of my last cheque for the sensation of gliding through space like that!"

As if in direct answer to his desire a mistive came hurtling down from the alrship.

Carruthers picked up the mistive and read: "N. QUILLER."

"Whoever finds this note of mine, Can fly with me at any time. Call at hangar number nine."

But the next day rain came down in torrents and the wind blew. Carruthers had a vague notion that bird men did not make flights in rainy weather.

The following day he and Mike set out for the aviation grounds.

Carruthers slackened his pace but when he drew near to the hangar that bore the name of N. Quiller.

Within, voices were heard and outside lay the great biplane.

Carruthers knocked at the green door and Mike barked imperiously.

A small man came from within and through the smoky goggles of his leather bonnet looked at the author.

With a hesitating gesture Carruthers held out the square of lead with its bit of paper.

"I am looking for a man by the name of N. Quiller—the man who dropped this—"

A silvery laugh came from behind the goggles. Carruthers started back.

"So you picked up my note," the laugh came again and Carruthers found himself making music of it. "I hoped it would be found and if you are ready we will go up immediately."

Carruthers had drawn away in his embarrassment. "I—I—had not expected to find a lady," he said hesitatingly and twirling his cap in a vague, undecided manner.

The voice from behind the goggles was slightly mocking. "You are not afraid, are you?"

"I might be if I could see your face," Carruthers told her with his whimsical smile.

Natalia Quiller colored swiftly beneath the leather bonnet. "Then you can not see my face until we reach terra firma," she cried laughingly.

"Come—I will take you up as my note promised."

"Don't you want to know the name of your passenger in case—"

"In case we come down quicker than we expect?" she laughed. "Yes," she said with sudden softness. "yes—I would like to know your name."

"John Carruthers—and that is my dog, Mike."

"Is my passenger then, the John Carruthers of short story fame?"

"I was seeking sensations for a story when your mistive nearly took my ear off," the author said.

"I hope you find—sensations," Natalia said with a wicked light in the eyes behind the goggles. And Carruthers found more than a story—he found a wife in the air.

Tactful Request.

Dobbieleg was a confirmed borrower, and what was worse, he seldom returned the borrowed articles. He had held on to Whitley's umbrella, for instance, for nearly a year.

"And I'm blest if I know how I am ever going to get it back," said Whitley.

"Easy," said Hickenlooper. "Call a messenger and send Dobbieleg this note."

And he scribbled off the following: "Dear Dobbieleg: If you can spare it I'd like to borrow that umbrella of mine for a couple of days. Can you oblige me?"—Harper's Weekly.

It has long been a Democratic custom in Madison county to give a second term to those officials who perform their duty well during the first term of office, and you can make no mistake by deciding to cast your vote for H. H. Terrell for re-election to the office of County Court Clerk. His record is open for the closest inspection.

I Will Stand the Percheron Stallion

For the season of 1912, at my mother's place near Richmond, on Big Hill pike at $15 to insure a living colt.

PEDIGREE:—BRILLIANT D. is a Percheron colt, bred by W. R. Grimaley of Sweetwater, Ill., color gray, foaled April 8, 1906. Sired by Gaudier's Percheron Stallion, imported by Dunham, Fletcher & Coleman, of Wayne, Ill. Gaudier's sire by Euxetate, he by Volcan, he by Bienville, he by Voltaire, he by Brillant, Danah's black mare by Keweenaw, he by Jas. Brown's Brilliant, a prize winner at the Chicago World's Fair, he by Brillant, one of the most noted Percherons of either France or America, for which Mr. Dunham was offered a very large price to let him go back to France. So it will be seen that BRILLIANT D. is very deeply bred in the Brilliant blood, and is fully entitled to the name of Brilliant.

I wish to impress upon parties having mares to breed, that BRILLIANT D. weighs 1700 pounds. I believe the time is at hand when weight will be brought to the money. Readers of the Breeder's Gazette will notice that within the last few days large numbers of Percheron mares have been sold for prices around and exceeding $500. Care taken to prevent accidents, but not responsible should any occur. When retained on colt until service fee is paid, or bred to another horse.

THE PROMISING YOUNG JACK

Will also make the season at the same time and place, at $10 to insure a living colt.

Money due when colt is foaled, mare parted with or bred to another horse or jack.

This Jack is of big bone, good head and ears, and must be seen to be appreciated. His colts which have been foaled, are of exceptional size and quality.

Loose Tom will be to the mule world what Peter the Great and Rex Pusvine are to the trotting and saddle horse world. He is by Wm. Todd's big Jack, he by Marmaduke. His first dam by Big Asa, he by Tom Keweenaw, he by Rube Hillington; 2d dam by Lora's Napoleon.

Mare kept on grass at 10 cents per day. Not responsible for accidents, but all care taken to prevent same.

Will also stand my Silver Creek Red Bone Hog at $1.00 each.

ASHAMED OF HER FACE

"It was ashamed of my face," writes Miss Hickory of North Carolina. "It was all full of pimples and marks, but after using D. D. D. Prescription for Acne I can say that now there is no sign of that. Acne and that was three years ago."

This is but one of thousands of cases in which D. D. D. has simply washed away the skin of the germs of Acne, Pimples and other eruptions, skin diseases, stops the itchiness, and when used with D. D. D. the cure seems to be permanent. Nothing like D. D. D. for the complexion.

Trial bottle 25 cents, enough to prove the merit of this wonderful remedy.

We can also give you a full size bottle for $1.00 on our absolute guarantee that if this very first bottle fails to give you relief it will cost you nothing.
